Bio

Meg Soper travels North America sharing powerful insights and strategies on how to be more effective in our personal and professional lives. Combining her experience as a registered nurse with her skill in stand-up comedy, she offers a unique blend of humour and inspirational ideas to connect with her audience, break barriers, and help people shift their perspective to better deal with day-to-day challenges.

A highly sought-after speaker and humourist, Soper has shared the stage with many celebrities, including Ray Romano and Ellen Degeneres. For each of her events, she invests the time to understand her audience and the challenges they face. She has touched the lives of thousands by combining her remarkable sense of humour with a curiosity about people.

Soper's diverse content has been shaped by her career as a staff nurse and as an operating room nurse in regional and major urban teaching hospitals. As a health care professional for 30 years, Soper recognizes the vital role that humour can play in creating a healthier workplace environment, in helping us deal better with stress, and in communicating more effectively.

Soper is the co-author of, From the Stage to the Page... Life Lessons from Four Funny Ladies. She has appeared on the CBC, CTV, the Women's Television Network, and on Prime TV.
