KEYNOTES:

Winning the Talent War: Three Unorthodox Rules to Elevate Recruiting, Retention, Performance, and Organizational Success

Gone are the days when a 250-300-word job description will do the work for us. Today, we must change the story we tell to attract (and keep) the best of the best. What does it look like to stand out from the competition to attract and retain top talent? [\[morelink\]](#)

The One Degree Shift: Building an Intentional Future

In a fast and dynamic world, the future is too unpredictable, which means our standard five- and ten-year strategy will no longer work. Yet, standing still is the fastest way to watch our competition and goals race off into the distance. What we need to do, is focus on building an intentional future. What we need to do is embrace the small, one-degree shifts we make every hour of the day that will get us to where we're going with more confidence, intention, and experimentation. Change can be scary. Standing still can be paralyzing. The one-degree approach is the way forward, in business and in life. It is the new framework to plan and thrive. [\[morelink\]](#)

Building a Thriving Community Rooted in Soft Skills, Belonging, and Psychological Safety

Having surveyed and interviewed thousands of people across North America, Eric Termuende profoundly discovered that a team doesn't always equate to success – community does. Gone are the days when we could simply attract people solely based on what they can do and the experience they have. Competition is too fierce and employees need to be a part of something bigger than a group of people that share a common skillset; they need to share values, a similar way of working, and have a sense of community that many teams miss.
