JAMIE MCMILLAN

TORCHBEARER FOR TRANSFORMATION

PIONEERING INCLUSION, NEURODIVERSITY, AND MENTAL WELLNESS IN WORKPLACES AND LEARNING ENVIRONMENTS

Jamie's mission goes beyond the trades. She's a champion for neurodiversity, mental health, and life skills in workplaces and all learning environments. Her initiative, Made in the Trades, promotes hands-on learning spaces that are not only inclusive but also psychologically safe for everyone, particularly neurodivergent individuals. Drawing on her personal experience as a neurodivergent person, Jamie understands the importance of designing spaces where people of all abilities can thrive.

Jamie's ability to engage diverse audiences - from industry leaders to educators and students - comes from her real-world experience and genuine approach. She emphasizes that success isn't just about technical skills but about fostering environments where people feel included, respected, and supported. Her advocacy pushes for neurodiverse-friendly workplaces and learning environments that prioritize mental wellness and create a sense of belonging for all.

Recognized across industries for her leadership, Jamie remains dedicated to driving real change. She's part of a broader movement to reshape how we think about education, mental health, and work, particularly for neurodivergent individuals. Her focus on life skills, mental wellness, and creating supportive, inclusive spaces is helping to build a more equitable future.

For organizations and educators ready to implement real, lasting change, Jamie is the thought leader you need. Her insights on inclusion, neurodiversity, and mental health are actionable and forward-thinking, making her an invaluable partner in creating workplaces and learning environments where everyone can thrive.

TOPICS & Outlines

All of Jamie's keynotes are highly customized within her own journey, knowledge, background and experience along with your overall goals/objectives of the session. She can speak with youth, educators, employers and more!

BORN TO BUILD

Everyone starts out a maker, an inventor, an explorer. Somewhere along the way we're told to color inside the lines. Jamie brings the curiosity back, helping people celebrate how they learn best, trust their imagination and rediscover the joy of making things with their hands.

Key Takeaways: Confidence that goes beyond testing, learning outside the lines, and trusting your own imagination.

ZERO LORE REQUIRED: Why the Future Belongs to Makers, Not Machines

The algorithm wants you predictable. Jamie wants you real. With zero lore and total honesty, she shares her path from restless student to ironworker who built her own way, and shows why hands-on creation, curiosity and grit are the ultimate superpowers in a machine-driven world.

Key Takeaways: Real-world skills, self-reliance, and why human makers will always outlast machines.

MASK OFF, TOOLS OUT: Trading Up Is a Skill

Jamie wore the mask for years, composed on the outside and fighting unseen battles inside. Then life slowed her down, and she found out what was waiting on the other side. This honest, funny, no-fluff talk is about taking the mask off, trading limits for strengths and starting over as many times as it takes.

Key Takeaways: Rebuilding self-worth, practical mastery, and knowing it is never too late to start over.

SOME ASSEMBLY REQUIRED: The Toolbox Inside Every Learner

Teachers are the architects of humanity, and every one of us was born with a toolbox. Jamie opens one on stage, tool by tool, to show the strengths already inside us and how to put them to work in ourselves and in the people we teach, raise and lead. Expect emotional intelligence, early childhood development, ADHD, autism, rejection sensitivity and a few surprises.

Key Takeaways: Seeing every learner, supporting minds that work differently, and opening one door for one person.
